MAKING AN IMPACT

CLAY'S STORY

There have been multiple challenges for Clay and his parents navigating his educational and medical journey. Clay was diagnosed with Attention Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) at an early age. As he began middle school, Clay's parents found themselves struggling to access quality medical care. At the same time, his behavior really began to spiral. He was subsequently in and out of the hospital and not qualifying for medicare, his parents eventually had to turn him over to the state. This action was taken for him to gain independent access to the care he needed. In October 2017, at the age of 14, Clay was placed in a group home where he was charged for criminal activity. He was then transferred to Stonewall Jackson Detention Center. During this time, his court counselor referred him to TreSports after school program.

Admittedly burned out from different programs and medications, Clay and his parents were pleasantly surprised at this new opportunity. "From the time we met Coach Rob in our intake meeting, he was so caring and friendly. I was at ease knowing Clay would be in good hands after our previous experiences. My son immediately related to the positive action curriculum and really opened up with the opportunity to participate on TreSports Queen City Ballers basketball team. Being labeled at such a young age, Clay never had an opportunity to play sports.

"Since my son started at TreSports and with on-going therapy, we have noticed a huge difference in his behavior and outlook on life," said Clay's mom. "He has hope now and is looking toward his future. He has benefitted from the life skills training, guest speakers and feeling accepted by his new teammates. The head instructor, Ms. Potts took him under her wing tutoring him in math. All of the staff, from the instructors, coaches and even the bus drivers have been so supportive of my son. Their positive action curriculum has taught him how to fit-in society. I wish I would've known about TreSport when Clay was younger but we are so thankful and blessed for all the program is doing for him now," she added.
